

A TV Fight

It was Friday afternoon. Ricky came home as fast as he could. He sat on the sofa and turned on the TV. He didn't want to miss his favourite cartoon 'Funny Cat'. He even forgot to take his shoes off. He was very excited. He watched the cartoon happily.

Then his sister, May, came back home. She wanted to watch TV too but May didn't like the cartoon. She thought it was silly. She was interested in sports programmes instead.

She wanted to watch 'Basketball Stars'. May said, 'Cartoons are boring. Let me watch 'Basketball Stars'!' Ricky said, 'No way!'

The siblings were mad. They argued about what programme to watch. May yelled, 'Let me watch it!' Ricky said, 'I will fall asleep in one minute!' They could not calm down. May took the remote and changed the channel to watch 'Basketball Stars'. Then Ricky changed it back to watch 'Funny Cat'. They kept going on and on. They almost broke the TV.

Mum stormed in and said, 'Stop! You two almost broke the TV. We have two TVs!' Ricky and May said, 'We are sorry.' They learnt that they had to think before acting.
