

A TV Fight

It was Friday afternoon. Ricky just got home after school. He sat on the sofa and started watching TV. He was watching a cartoon. It was called 'The Cat'. He loved it. He always watches it after school. He always makes it on time because the cartoon starts at 4:00 p.m and he arrives home at 3:55. The show is two hours long.

One hour later, his sister came home after her singing lesson. She wanted to watch TV too. So she said rudely, 'Give the remote control to me! I want to watch the basketball match! I don't want to miss it!' Ricky replied back, 'No! I am watching my favourite cartoon.'

And they started to argue with each other. Ricky yelled, 'I hate watching sports programmes!' His sister yelled back, 'But I hate watching cartoons!' And they started fighting with each other.

Their mum heard the argument and went to see what was happening. She asked, 'What is happening?' Ricky's sister yelled, 'He wouldn't give the remote control to me!' Ricky yelled back, 'No, Mum. That's all lies! Don't trust her!' Mum asked, 'Have you two finished your homework yet?' They both replied, 'No.' Mum yelled, 'Then go to your rooms to do your homework first! Also, didn't I tell you two that you cannot watch TV when your homework isn't finished yet?' They both replied, 'Yes.'

In the end, they sadly walked to their rooms to do their homework. When Ricky was doing his homework, he said quietly, 'Well. I definitely learnt that it is a silly thing to fight over a remote control.' By the time he finished his homework, it was already 11 p.m. So he couldn't watch TV.

P.4C Hang Yuet Long, George